atlanta | off the nook. ★

forget the crannies. everything's out in the open and there's no hiding in the corner when the nook opens friday.

it's finally the time for picnics and people watching. worked up an appetite after a leisurely stroll through piedmont park? stop in at the nook, the cozy new tavern set to open in the old prince of wales spot. owners adam gajadharsingh, gabriel greenberg and david duley also head up the sutra lounge, but you won't find any of the velvet roped pretentiousness here. the friendly brick resto with covered patio will serve up the expected suds and comfort food with one very tasty twist: tater tots. not just the stuff of school caf lunches, the nook will serve a wide variety of smothered tots called "totchos" including the redneck totchos

(pulled pork with barbecue sauce and cheese), nachos totchos and philly totchos. and while you're there, decide if you need to try the brunch (chicken and jalepeno waffles) or just order up a "picnook" to go.

you don't need to leave town to eat at this tavern on the green. the nook. 1144 piedmont avenue. between 13th and 14th. 404.745.9222. opens march 20th.
